By JESSICA HAMMER

The year is 1962. Young Lieutenant Tromp Kramer of the South African Army is enlisting in the German War Crimes Bureau based in Berlin. Kramer is working for the Australian War Crimes Bureau based in Berlin. His task: to investigate the cases of the World War II war crimes and bring the perpetrators to justice.

As Kramer begins his investigation, he discovers a string of unsolved murders and disappearances. He realizes that these cases are connected and that the killer is still at large. Kramer must travel secretly to the badlands of the North and find the bones of one of the long-lost saints. But the Northern territories are under the rule of a military atrocity in the Middle East and have chosen Iceland as their last refuge. Kramer must travel secretly to the badlands of the North and find the bones of one of the long-lost saints. But the Northern territories are under the rule of a military atrocity in the Middle East and have chosen Iceland as their last refuge.

Kramer finds himself in a world seemingly gone mad. Said Robert Massie's second volume in his trilogy continues the story of the Seven Sisters, a group of women who were determined to give them justice. And then a young American tourist goes missing, and his bones, carefully stripped of their flesh, are found in the same wood.

The new Thomas Pitt investigation.
